

APTIS (Accountancy and Passenger Ticket Issuing System)

The production machines were renamed 'Accountancy and Passenger Ticket Issuing System'. This is the standard ticket office machine now used on National Railways.

Tickets have rounded corners. The layout is basically the same as the prototype machines but the top line now includes the number of adults and children travelling on one ticket. SINGLE, OUTWARD and RETURN are now abbreviated. The time of issue is shown on the bottom line.

The machines were later modified to operate London Underground's UTS ticket barriers. Tickets from modified machines being identified by a symbol between the machine number and NLC.

The name on platform tickets is sometimes different to that shown on travel tickets, e.g. LANGLEY BUCKS appears on platform tickets, whereas LANGLEY BERKS is shown on travel tickets. Travel tickets from stations that are part of a group originally showed the group name with a BR suffix, those from London later changing to BRIT RAIL. As a result of privatisation, these suffixes were replaced by STNS or STATIONS from November 1997. Tickets from London terminal stations now show LONDON TERMINALS.

References in the comments column to platform tickets will also apply to railcards, receipts and credit card slips which would also show the same name variation. Machines numbered 95 to 99 are spare machines, used at windows due to machine breakdowns etc. They can also be used for other purposes such as bar code reading and for accounting. It should be noted that although tickets have been seen from these machines, they may not always be available from them.

From October 1993 for a short period, some stations were issuing tickets showing the region as 'U' in error. APTIS has been used by a number of Travel Agents, principally American Express and Thomas Cook. Tickets from these machines will show stations for any ticket that is requested. The name as shown in the list would only appear on receipts etc. Platform tickets are not available from these machines.

Since late 1994, Travel Centres in the area covered by 'South West Trains' have their own NLC's but retain their original window numbers. There is no change to the name appearing on travel tickets, but platform tickets from these locations now have the suffix 'TC' following the station name.

Telesales offices are a development, where tickets are ordered by telephone and charged to a credit card. Travel tickets from these machines will therefore show a station name for any journey that is requested. Some locations have their own NLC's and location name, others use existing machines in the ticket office. Platform tickets, if available, would show the Telesales office name or the usual station name.

From December 1998, some station names have been suffixed by a dot. Those stations are not listed here, see appendix.

The list is divided into four sections:

- 1) Stations - Machines located at stations and includes those in Travel Centres at stations.
- 2) BR Travel Centres and Offices - Machines located in Travel Centres located away from stations, Telesales Offices and Business travel offices.
- 3) Miscellaneous & Internal Use - Machines used for Internal accounting and training.

4) Travel Agents - Machines used by independent agents.

Addresses of Travel Agents and other offices using APTIS

This lists the full postal address and agency code, where known, of Travel Agents and other offices reported to have used APTIS. Agents marked "*" either no longer use APTIS or have changed their name or address. It is possible that other locations may have ceased using APTIS, some have converted to Tribute. Some agents will only issue tickets to business customers.
