

ASCOM B8050

This is similar in appearance and operation to the Autelca B100. There are two versions: one with 92 destination buttons, the other with 40 buttons for use at smaller stations. A further 18 buttons provide the ticket types. Tickets now have an oxide strip on the back to operate the UTS gates when valid for use on the London Underground. The form number is RSP No.3595/3 (was BR No.3595/3) A few stations have used RSP 3595/30 card, the only difference being the addition of a VAT number on the reverse. There is a small oblong hole near the left edge of the ticket to aid alignment during printing. Returns consist of two separate tickets. This machine can also issue 7 day Travelcard / Season tickets from a separate ticket roll with green edged bands, the form number is RSP No.3595/4. The ticket layout is identical to APTIS tickets, even including the number of adults or children, although tickets can only be issued for use by one person. Some machines also issue car park and platform tickets.

As with APTIS tickets, stations that are part of a group show a STATIONS, or latterly TERMINALS for London, (previously BR) suffix instead of the full station name, except for some local journeys and Travelcards.

From December 1998, some station names have been suffixed by a dot. Those stations are not listed here, see appendix.
