

Fujitsu STAR

These are a rival to the SMART Terminal, being Ticket Office-based machines linked to the RJIS journey planning system which has been used for many years. The intention is for ticket retailing to be made quicker and more efficient through this link-up, and indeed the acronym stands for "Station Terminals for Advanced Rail Retailing". South West Trains signed a contract in late 2004 for the supply of approximately 300 machines for its stations. Subsequently, several other Train Operating Companies have chosen the system for their ticket offices: Merseyrail, f ScotRail, South Eastern Trains, Arriva Trains Wales and TransPennine Express. The machines have a wide geographical distribution, therefore. Machine numbers are in the 1xxx series; and positions ("windows") are numbered upwards from 30, after early experiments where the first machine at a station was given a window number one higher than the highest APTIS window number at that location. (For example, Basingstoke's APTIS positions at one time went up as high as 5520S06, so the four trial STAR machines installed in 2003 and 2004 were allocated S07, S08, S09 and S10. These were later renumbered to fit the chosen convention.)

Text in GREEN indicates a machine that has been removed from the relevant location, or a position (NLC/region/window number combination) which no longer exists.
